

CONTRIBUTORS (Alphabetic order)

Dr. Doron B. Cohen

Lecturer, The Institute of Liberal Arts, Doshisha University

Graduated from the Hebrew University in Jerusalem with a BA in Jewish Thought and East Asian Studies. Received his M.Th. and D. Th. from the School of Theology, Doshisha University. Currently teaches at the Institute of Liberal Arts and Faculty of Letters, Doshisha University. Translates from English, Arabic and mainly Japanese into Hebrew, including novels and poetry, on which he has also published academic papers. His book The Japanese Translations of the Hebrew Bible: History, Inventory and Analysis (Leiden-Boston, Brill, 2013) was published in January.

Dr. Daniel Davies

Research Associate, Cambridge University Library

Graduated from the University of Birmingham with BA (Honors). Received his MA and PhD from the Faculty of Theology of the University of Cambridge. He is currently Research Associate at Taylor-Schechter Genizah Research Unit, Cambridge University Library. He is lecturing at Canterbury Christ Church University and Leo Baeck College in London. Authored the volume: Method and Metaphysics in Maimonides' Guide for the Perplexed (New York, Oxford University Press 2011). With Shmuel Glick et al., Seride Teshuvot: a descriptive catalogue of responsa fragments from the Jacques Mosseri Collection, Cambridge University Library (Leiden, Brill, 2012).

Prof. Warren Zev Harvey

Emeritus Professor of Jewish Thought, The Hebrew University, Jerusalem

Prof. Warren Zev Harvey was born in 1943 in New York, USA. He immigrated to Israel in 1977 and was a professor of Jewish Studies until his retirement in 2011 as Emeritus professor of the Department of Jewish Thought at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. Today he is a visiting professor at the department of Philosophy in Columbia University, NY. BA at the Department of Philosophy, Columbia University (1965). PhD (1973) at the Department of Philosophy, Columbia University; He was faculty member from 1972-1977 at the Department of Philosophy at McGill University; and between 1977-2011 at the Department of Jewish Thought, Hebrew University, Jerusalem. Prof. Harvey wrote beside his books about 150 papers and edited a number of books. His important books include Physics and Metaphysics in Hasdai Crescas. Amsterdam: Gieben, 1998; and Rabbi Hasdai Crescas [in Hebrew], The Zalman Shazar Center, Jerusalem 2010.

Mr. Yu Hoki

PhD course of the Faculty of Letters, Kyoto University

Graduated from the Department of Arabic, Tokyo University of Foreign Studies. Received MA from the Department of West-Asian History, Kyoto University. As a PhD student his research areas are Arabic medical literature and its relation to philosophical arguments.

Ms. Aiko Kanda

PhD course of the School of Theology , Doshisha University

Graduated from Sophia University (Tokyo) with BA in Journalism. Worked at NEC Corporation and studied Christian theology at Tokyo Baptist Theological Seminary. Received MA in Religions and Theology from the University of Manchester and currently enrolled in the doctoral course at Doshisha University. Was a visiting student at Leo Baeck College (London) last academic year. Article (Japanese): “A Transitional Path to God in Maimonides — The Guide of the Perplexed III: 51 — ”, in: Studies in Medieval Thought, Vol. 53 (2011).

Dr. Toshiharu Nigo

Lecturer, School of Theology, Doshisha University

Graduated from the Faculty of Letters, Tokyo University. Received his MA from the Department of Islamic Studies, Graduate School of Humanities and Society, Tokyo University. Currently lecturing at the Doshisha School of Theology. Research areas are medieval Arabic logical traditions, Islamic theology and philosophy in the Middle East and Chinese script works of Chinese Muslim scholars. A research member in two translation and text analysis projects: Avicenna's masterpiece, al-Shifa' (The Cure) and Tianfang Xingli written by Liu Zhi in the Qing dynasty.

Prof. Rabbi Marc Saperstein

Emeritus Professor of Jewish History, The George Washington University, DC

Prof. Saperstein was born in 1944 in New York, USA, where he grew up and did his undergraduate studies. He then specialized in Jewish studies after being ordained as a Rabbi of the Reform Movement. He is today Charles E. Smith Emeritus Professor of Jewish History of The George Washington University and a visiting professor at King's College and partly teaching at Leo Baeck College, in London. Harvard College, AB (1962–66); Pembroke College, University of Cambridge, England (1966–67); Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, New York-M.A. and ordination as Rabbi (1967–72); Hebrew University, Jerusalem-M. A. Jewish History, Hebrew Literature (1969–71); Harvard Graduate School of Arts and Sciences-

PhD (1972–77). Prof. Saperstein has more than a hundred articles and encyclopedia entries. His latest authored books are: Exile in Amsterdam: Saul Levi Morteira's Sermons to a Congregation of "New Jews" (Cincinnati: HUC Press, February 2005); and Jewish Preaching in Times of War 1800–2001 (Oxford: Littman Library of Jewish Civilization, 2008).

Prof. Hisao Takagi

Associate Professor, The Center for Liberal Arts, Meiji Gakuin University, Tokyo

Graduated from the International Christian University in Tokyo (BA and PhD) and from Columbia University (MS). His major fields of interest are Jewish and Western philosophy in the medieval and early modern periods, as well as the history of the faith-reason problem, and in both aspects Baruch de Spinoza inter alia.